Employer Best Practices during an OSHA Inspection

... featuring ...

Alex A. Wheatley, Fisher Phillips

Alex Wheatley is an associate in Fisher Phillip's Portland office. Alex defends employers in employment-related administrative claims and lawsuits. He also advises and provides training to company owners and supervisors on issues relating to workplace discrimination, family leave, wage and hour laws, and noncompetition, nonsolicitation, and nondisclosure agreements.

Alex graduated from the University of Alabama and The Northwestern School of Law at Lewis & Clark College. He graduated magna cum laude from Lewis & Clark, where he received the Legal Analysis and Writing Honors Award and served on the Editorial Board of Environmental Law as the Editor for the online journal.

In this seminar, we will explore how to plan and prepare for potential OSHA inspections and discuss employer best practices in the event of an OSHA inspection. Few things cause employers more anxiety than an unannounced inspection by OSHA. However, proper planning and a strong understanding of OSHA's role and the employer's rights and obligations can significantly reduce that fear. We will examine the limits of OSHA's inspection authority, employers' rights during such inspections, and the steps employers should take before, during, and after the inspection to ensure the best possible outcome.
